MAYAZUL LODGE

Exclusivity Meets the Permit Challenge

It was just a matter of time until Nervous Waters looked to Mexico– it’s natural for us, as Mexico has a history of great hospitality, great guides, and a service culture that makes it fun to be a visitor. But we have been waiting for the right time and the right location and we have finally found both. A place in the Sian Ka’an Reserve, Quintana Roo, Mexico, where a challenging fishery awaits. Where you’ll meet passionate fishermen like yourself and embrace the challenge of being face to face with a permit, and when not fishing, sharing knowledge, theories, stories, and permit dreams. We look forward to welcoming you to Mayazul Lodge – a small, elegant retreat in the heart of Mexico’s “permit alley” where fly anglers have a history of success pursuing the black-tailed devil of the flats, the elusive and coveted permit. And while others have done it, nobody has done it like Nervous Waters; a small lodge on the water, single rooms and single guides, and a laser focus on getting anglers as many shots at permit as possible.

LOCATION

Mayazul Lodge is located on the Yucatán Península, approximately 56 kilometers south of Tulum in the sleepy fishing village of Punta Allen, Mexico within the Sian Ka'an biosphere reserve. The Cancún International Airport is the point of entry.

Sian Ka'an is home to nine different ecosystems, a wealth of flora and fauna, including 320 bird species, nearly 100 mammals, 90 species of native bees, 47 species of dragonflies, 74 species of beetles, 310 species of mosquitos, 318 species of butterflies, 84 species of coral, and five neotropical felines. It is also home to many archeological sites like Muyil, and, 120 kilometers of the Mesoamerican reef are included in it, which provides the area with a double heritage UNESCO designation.

Sian Ka'an, as a tourist destination, is also part of Maya Ka'an, a very rich region that offers very unique experiences in natural environments combined with the historical and cultural elements of the Mayan communities of today. It is said that the channels of the biosphere reserve were used by the Mayan people (and other indigenous groups) as commercial trade routes to reach the site of Muyil. Canoes would enter from the Boca Paila side of the Caribbean Sea.

GETTING THERE

Mayazul Lodge is located on the Yucatán Peninsula, just south of the sleepy fishing village of Punta Allen, Mexico within the Sian Ka'an biosphere reserve. There are two (2) International airports which access the region, Cancún International (CUN) – approximately 107 miles – and the new Tulum International Airport (TQO) – approximately 60 miles and nearly an hour closer to the lodge. Both airports have multiple direct flights from the USA or other countries as well as Mexico City.

When booking flights, we suggest planning to arrive Cancun or Tulum no later than 2:00 PM and plan on departing after 1:00 PM to ensure adequate time to transfer to/from the lodge. Anglers arriving Cancun might consider an overnight on arrival offering time to relax and added time to make the transfer. We will pick you up at the airport with a suitable vehicle and in approximately 2 hours we will arrive at the Sian Ka'an Reserve, from there we will go by Panga to Punta Allen. The boat ride down the inner lagoon will take approximately one hour and you will see a good deal of the flora and fauna found in the the unspoiled Yucatan as well as prime permit habitat! Upon arrival in Punta Allen we will have a short 5-minute trip by vehicle to the Lodge.

THE FISHING

Ascension Bay is located on the southeast coast of the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico and is home to some of the best fishing areas in the world. Located in the small beachfront town of Punta Allen about 45 kilometers off the beaten path and approximately three hours from the popular tourist destination of Cancun, our lodge is far from the distractions of everyday life. It's perfectly situated to access our primary fishing objective – the permit.

Nestled in the Sian Ka'an Biosphere, a vast international wildlife park that spans some 1.3 million acres, Ascension Bay has been protected from commercial fishing and development. This has allowed the local wildlife both above and below the water to prosper. The bay has developed into one of the most prolific and diverse bonefish, permit, snook, and baby tarpon fisheries in the entire Caribbean.

Blessed with miles of coastline, shallow flats, and lagoon systems, the fishing opportunities here are endless. Our season is long, providing anglers over 8 months of prime weather to come and stalk the shallow water fish of the Caribbean. Surrounded by pristine mangrove-lined shores with a backdrop of lush green rainforest, it's the perfect habitat for all the famous flats species. Grand slams and super slams are undoubtedly achievable. Ascension Bay is a destination where the fish are getting bigger, and saltwater fly fishing is getting better with every passing season due to strict regulations implemented years ago to protect this amazing resource.

Permit fishing is well known for good reason – it is some of the most productive in the world. Actually, so much so that Ascension Bay is often referred to as ‘The Permit Capital’. This fantastic fish stands alone as one of the hardest to catch on the fly, the primary reason it is so appealing to anglers all around the world. Our guides fish for permit not only as a job but as a passion. Many take their days off to scout new locations or fish for permit themselves. They all share our common love of this amazing fish, and we as a team will make sure you have the best opportunity to be a successful permit angler at Mayazul.

For a long time, the permit was only pursued by certain specialists. There was not much information about permit fishing, and there were even fewer dedicated guides. Successfully pursuing and catching a permit therefore seemed unattainable for the majority of anglers. Nowadays, the angling world has poured resources and created the demand for an increased understanding of these special fish. We now know more about their behavior and habits than ever before, and every day there are more guides who have dedicated their lives to stalking and learning about permit. Specialized equipment and flies have been designed with the sole purpose of maximizing permit fishing odds. Our promise at Mayazul is to bring all these years of development into your hands and at your disposal when you arrive at the lodge.

SPECIES

Ascension Bay has one of the largest permit populations in the entire world, with a great diversity of situations that will undoubtedly fit your tastes and abilities. If it is your first-time permit fishing, you need to have some fly-casting skills, the ability to listen to your guide, and especially, the luck to find the ‘right’ fish. In permit fishing, you can do everything perfectly, but whether the fish eats your fly or not might simply depend on its attitude. Those of us who have been doing it for years always say “If you know what to do and you have the ability to do it, everything else depends on the fish.”

are the ultimate ambush predator on the flats, typically holding up tight on the coastline under branches or mangroves waiting for unsuspecting prey to swim past. The population is protected and features some of the most significant specimens you’ll encounter anywhere in the world.

Ascension Bay has the largest bonefish population per square water acre than anywhere else in the world. Unlike some other species in the bay, bonefish will readily eat a well-presented fly, making 20 – 30 fish days a regular occurrence. They are the most honest species on the flats, and if you do your part, they will usually do theirs.

Thanks to the protection of the Sian Ka'an Biosphere, Ascension Bay has a huge nursery of juvenile tarpon. These fish are often called “Baby Tarpon”, but they still average between 10 and 30 pounds, with fish over 50 pounds coming to hand each year. To make it even more interesting, migratory tarpon show up during the summer months, with sizes that average 70 pounds but they can reach 130 pounds or more. These fish are found on the sandy coastal flats and also inside the Bay.

While the big four flats species are often at the top of saltwater fly fisherman’s list, Ascension Bay is home to many other species of sport fish such as triggerfish, jack crevalle, and barracuda, as well as many types of snappers and groupers. If anglers come with an open mind, they are sure to catch many species on the fly at Mayazul.

Comfortable pangas-Permit landing craft- are beached right near the lodge. No bumpy roads. No wasted time trailering.

The typical trip does not fish on arrival or departure, but if time allows and guides are available, half-day trips can be arranged prior to getting here.
