A HIGHER FORM OF FISHING

SUINDÁ LODGE

ITATÍ, CORRIENTES, ARGENTINA

Suindá Lodge was strategically built on the banks of the Paraná River in Corrientes Province, near Itatí, a small riverside village—home to some of the largest dorado in the world.

SUINDÁ LODGE

Chase freshwater's grandest slam

Perfectly placed in the heart of Argentina's most renowned big-dorado waters, Suindá Lodge sits high on the riverbank overlooking the clear, upper reaches of the Paraná River. This area holds one of the most productive sections on the entire system—a clear-water fishery shaped by fast currents and expansive rock gardens, where large dorado thrive.

Our intimate jungle lodge serves as a warm and comfortable base for anglers in search of these powerful fish. Whether crashing sábalo on shallow sand flats or sliding along jungle-lined banks, the dorado of Suindá are smart, selective, moody, and incredibly rewarding—offering one of the most technical freshwater experiences in South America.

WHY CHOOSE SUINDÁ LODGE?

- Located on the Upper Paraná system, where clear waters provide exceptional sight-fishing for dorado, along with exciting opportunities for pirá pitá and pacú on dry flies and light tackle.
- Home to Suindá's signature experience: sandbank sight-casting, where anglers target dorado in shallow water—an encounter often compared to saltwater-style flats fishing.
- Positioned on the most pristine and structurally rich section of the legendary Paraná River. Its vast rocky-bottom formations are the reason why this area consistently produces some of the largest dorado across the whole Paraná system.
- An intimate, beautifully built wooden jungle lodge, comfortably hosting up to 10 anglers.
- Thoughtfully designed accommodations and warm, attentive service ensure a high-end experience in the heart of the jungle.
- Professional local guides specializing in fly and light-tackle techniques, with deep knowledge of the river's structure and behavior.
- Spinning and baitcasting are also permitted, offering anglers additional effective techniques for targeting dorado, pacú, and pirá pitá on the Upper Paraná.
- A true multispecies program designed for anglers seeking challenging, highly rewarding fishing in clear water.
- Double-digit dorado are a real possibility throughout the entire season.
- The most productive stretch for exotic pacú and hard-charging pirá pitá—the two species that complete our freshwater grand slam alongside dorado.
- Custom, comfort-enhanced technical skiffs built specifically for navigating and fishing the Paraná.
- High-quality loaner equipment available at no additional cost.
- À la carte menu, featuring delicious local and international cuisine.

The region houses one of the most productive sections on the Upper Paraná River, a clear-water fishery that consistently kicks out good numbers of large Dorado.

LOCATION

Suindá is located on the southern bank (Argentina side) of the Paraná River, which forms the natural border between Argentina and Paraguay. The lodge lies closest to the river town of Itatí, in the Corrientes region. This section of the Paraná flows clear along beautiful banks, sandbars, rocky structure, and islands that form deltas and smaller riachos (streams).

The stilted living quarters are perched on a high bluff, raised nine feet above the ground and offering soaring views of the sprawling river and its natural surroundings. Wooden footbridges connect each room to the main dining hall. From there, it's a short walk to the water, where you'll spend your days exploring the Paraná's most productive, structure-rich sections in search of monster dorado.

GETTING THERE

Daily non-stop flights are available from Buenos Aires Aeroparque Domestic Airport (AEP) to either Corrientes (CNQ) or Resistencia (RES), with a flight time of approximately one hour.

FROM CORRIENTES (CNQ): A 45-minute drive to the water's edge, followed by a short boat transfer to the lodge.

FROM RESISTENCIA (RES): Approximately a 2-hour drive to the water's edge, followed by a boat transfer to the lodge.

THE FISHING

Fishing at Suindá takes place on the upper Paraná River. The Paraná is the second-longest river in South America after the Amazon, and here we fish a clear-flowing stretch along the border with Paraguay, framed by jungle expanses on both sides. You'll explore this dynamic fishery aboard 21-foot boats specifically designed so two anglers can fish comfortably and simultaneously. Once the engines are cut, you'll drift along structure-rich shorelines, casting to sunken logs, boulders, and clear sandbars. We primarily fish streamers on floating lines, creating explosive, highly visual takes.

Paraná River Dorado average 5 to 20 pounds, but there are also fish pushing 30+ pounds. When the conditions align, you'll wade clear sandbars where sabalo baitfish school up in shallow waters. This is the ultimate sight-fishing experience, where landing monsters is a real possibility. As the sun sets on the horizon, you might find yourself swinging big flies through productive mid-river rock gardens. The hard takes on the swing are unforgettable.

In addition to Golden Dorado, we also target Pirá Pitá on light tackle (6 and 7-weight rods). This species is pound for pound one of the stronger fish we catch on big dries and smaller mouse patterns. Our Pirá Pitá average 2 to 10 pounds. Pacú also abound here, and we typically sight-cast for them with "fruit" flies. They also take on the surface, and range from 5 to 15 pounds (heavier, if you're lucky).

At Suindá, boats are never trailered—they remain at the dock each evening, gassed up and ready to go every morning.

Few experiences rival sight casting trophy dorado on the sandbank flats — silently pushpoling into position as the angler casts from the bow deck, or slipping into the water to wade within range of fish crushing bait in skinny water.

Landing a 20+ lb dorado on the fly is a true challenge—one every fly angler should pursue.

There are two types of Pirá Pitá—silver and yellow. Here, a beautiful yellow one caught on a mouse pattern.

DAILY ITINERARY

Every day at Suindá begins with a fresh, hot breakfast prepared with local ingredients and eggs from our own lodge-raised hens. After eating, you'll head down to our newly constructed dock—just a short 30-meter walk from the lodge—to meet your guides for the morning fishing session. We usually launch around 6:30 AM, although this may vary depending on conditions.

After spending the morning on the water pursuing dorado, pacú, and pirá pitá, you'll return to the lodge for lunch prepared by our head chef. The midday heat is the perfect opportunity to take a dip in the pool with a cold beer or enjoy a siesta before the evening session.

Around 4:30 PM, your guides will be waiting at the dock to head out again, typically returning shortly after dark for dinner. While you're exploring the Parana, our chef prepares dinner—often over the open fire. After you return to your rooms and freshen up, dinner will be served followed by drinks at the bar where the day's fishing stories will be shared and lauded.

BEYOND DORADO

For those visiting Argentina during the dorado season, there's much more to experience with The Kautapen Group and our sister brands Nervous Waters Fly Fishing, David Denies Bird Hunting & Red Stag Patagonia—all sharing the same standard of service, guiding, and hospitality.

A natural pairing with Suindá is Pirá Lodge, offering year round dorado fishing in the Iberá Marshlands. Many anglers combine Suindá (October to April) with Pirá to experience two contrasting environments, from the rocky structure of the Paraná to the clear marsh channels and shallow lagoons of Iberá.

Suindá also pairs well with Karandá Lodge, which operates from June through December, offering a different style of Paraná fishing with heavy structure, island channels, and strong dorado, pacú, and pirá pitá opportunities.

Delta Lodge, just outside Buenos Aires, operates year round and makes for an easy pre or post trip extension, with dorado and tararira fishing in a lowland river system.

Farther south, the sea run brown trout season on the Río Grande runs January through April, overlapping with Suindá's peak months. Kau Tapen and Villa María deliver an exceptional contrast to warm water dorado fishing.

In Patagonia, Chime and Futa operate December through April, offering classic dry fly and streamer fishing for brown and rainbow trout across remote rivers and lakes.

Beyond fishing, David Denies Bird Hunting provides premier wingshooting in Argentina and Uruguay, while Red Stag Patagonia offers free range big game hunting across prime seasons in some of the Southern Hemisphere's most striking landscapes.

Wherever you choose to go, every destination within The Kautapen Group reflects the same commitment to quality, authenticity, and hospitality that defines Suindá Lodge.
